SEMINAR IN LITERARY STUDIES METHODOLOGY
Argentine Universities Program, Buenos Aires

Suggested US semester credit hours: 3
Contact hours: 60
IFSA-Butler Course Code: SP401-14
Instructor name/title: Diego Peller
Delivery method: Face to Face
Host institution affiliation: Universidad de Buenos Aires

COURSE DESCRIPTION
Students enrolled in the IFSA-Butler Literature concentration on the Argentine Universities Program undergo a practical work experience in literature, creative writing, editing and journalism fields. Two options are available to students: hands-on training through a fieldwork experience (in a publishing company or a cultural magazine) or attending a writing workshop with local Argentine authors. In both cases, the practical work in the workshop or fieldwork experience is supported by a methodological reflection aimed at contextualizing and supporting the practical experience and the preparation of a final paper where students analyze their experiences, the goals they were planning to achieve, the challenges they faced and their achievements.

This course offers students the categories and theoretical tools, as well as the methodological basis complementing the practical experience in the fieldwork experience and writing workshops. Hence, the course has been prepared in a seminar format, with some expository classes by the professor but with intensive student participation through individual presentations, in-class discussions and individual meetings with the professor to monitor work progress and final paper preparation. This course is required for students on this concentration.

COURSE GOALS
The seminar has two main goals. First, it aims at introducing students to basic theoretical and methodological concepts of literary studies. Second, it has the purpose of providing students with theoretical and methodological tools and assisting them in the preparation of a final paper where they will describe their learning experience at the writing workshop or in the fieldwork experience developed at a publishing house or in a literary magazine.

STUDENT LEARNING OBJECTIVES

• Apply the literary studies specific theoretical and methodological tools, learned during the seminar, to the critical analysis of literary texts.
• Understand the specific problem areas of literary studies, the specificity notions of literary works and the immanence of textual analysis.
• Learn and practice different specific literary research writing forms: reading critical essay, work plan, work report, thesis, etc.
• 70 participation hours for either the writing workshop or a fieldwork experience at a publishing house or cultural magazine.
• Prepare and submit an initial work plan to define the goals expected to be met in the practical
• Prepare and submit a final work report with a thorough description of the practical work performed and specifying the extent expected goals have been met and how experience led to a reformulation of the student’s initial goals.
• Become aware of resources for further study of this discipline.
• Strengthen critical thinking skills.
• Strengthen academic writing skills.
• Make cognitive connections between this course and other courses on the Argentine Universities Program.

COURSE RULES AND WORK METHODOLOGY

Attendance: 80% attendance to the seminar classes and 70 hours of participation in the writing workshop or the fieldwork experience will be required.

Preparation: Students must read the corresponding mandatory bibliography before attending class, as they must be able to participate actively in the class discussions.

Participation: The course will have the form of a theoretical-practical seminar with the students’ active participation. The seminar will have 15 meetings, each lasting for two hours.

Academic Honesty: IFSA-Butler takes academic integrity very seriously. Students must not accept outside assistance without permission from the instructor. Additionally, students must document all sources according to the instructions of the professor. Should your professor suspect you of plagiarism, cheating, or other forms of academic dishonesty, you may receive a fail for the course and disciplinary action may occur. The incident will be reported to the resident director as well as your home university. It is your responsibility to understand what constitutes academic misconduct, as definitions vary by culture.

Course Review:
In the first meetings, the professor will expose the main steps and the basic theoretical and methodological tools that are used to prepare a work in the field of literary studies. The students will participate with presentations and individual and group assignments. Each meeting will be referred to a particular stage of the research process in the literary studies, so that the students will have the possibility to clarify any specific doubts at each juncture of their final research paper preparation and writing.

The last meetings will have the form of tutorials with the purpose of providing students with personalized assistance for the development and completion of their final research papers (structuring, writing, analysis and conclusions). Each student will have a personal interview with the professor to discuss the state of his/her work and receive advice and guidance feedback.

Literary Workshop and Fieldwork Experience Program Selection: At the beginning of the semester, each student will have an individual meeting with the IFSA-Butler literature concentration coordinator to decide in which workshop or fieldwork experience he/she choose to enroll. The following are just some of the options:

- Literary Workshops: Story Workshop, Creative Writing Workshop, Writing Techniques, Editorial Writing Workshop, Report Writing Workshop, etc.
- Fieldwork Experience: Editorial LEA (LEA Publishing House), Editorial Santiago Arcos (Santiago Arcos Publishing House), Revista de Artes y Letras Otra Parte (“Otra Parte” Arts and Letters Magazine), Revista de Artes Ramona (“Ramona” Arts magazine), etc.

Workshops and fieldwork experiences start almost halfway through the semester and last three months. In the case of fieldwork experience, students should complete 70 working hours. For the writing workshops, at least 40 of those 70 hours are class contact hours, and the remaining hours correspond to the time required by students to prepare the assignments to be presented during the workshop.

ASSESSMENT
Once students have finished their 70-hour practical experience, those responsible for the selected workshop or fieldwork experience will present a written report evaluating the student’s performance.

Students will submit a final report analyzing their practical experience and using the methodology principles acquired during the course of the seminar.

The final evaluation will take into account the attendance and active participation in the seminar theoretical classes (35% of the final grade), the final evaluation of the person responsible for the workshop or fieldwork experience (30% of the final grade) and the final written report submitted by the student (35% of the final grade).

Formal Guidelines for the Final Written Report:
The report length will be seven to eight pages, double-spaced (excluding appendix pages). The report will be divided into two parts. The first part will be of a descriptive-quantitative nature and students will describe, in a very accurate and detailed manner, all the activities performed during the literary workshop/fieldwork experience in which they participated. The second part will be an articulating essay in which students will present a brief description of their learning experience, their initial expectations, the challenges that appeared along the way, and their achievements and their reflections. Finally, there will be a third section, referred to as appendix that will include a copy of the entire student’s written production during the writing workshop/fieldwork experience. The length of the appendix may vary, depending on each particular case.

ACADEMIC INTEGRITY
Any academic endeavor must be based upon a foundation of honesty and integrity. Students are expected to abide by principles of academic integrity and must be willing to bear individual responsibility for their work while studying abroad. Any academic work (written or otherwise) submitted to fulfill an academic requirement must represent a student’s original work. Any act of academic misconduct, such as cheating, fabrication, forgery, plagiarism, or facilitating academic dishonesty, will subject a student to disciplinary action.
